Elephants.
Tuberculosis concerns part of the delay

Toronto Zoo officials are no closer to settling on a date to send its three elephants to the PAWS sanctuary in California, despite a meeting held Thursday morning in the mayor's office to try to resolve the impasse between the two animal centres.

Councillors Michelle Berardinetti, Giorgio Mammoliti and Toronto Zoo CEO John Tracogna emerged solemn-faced from the meeting to say legal "sticking points" are still holding up an agreement that would see the elephants flown in a cargo plane to the Performing Animal Welfare Society's sanctuary near San Andreas, Calif.

As a result, Mammoliti, the mayor's representative on the file, Berardinetti, who is pushing hard for the elephant transfer, and representatives from the zoo, including its top veterinarian, will fly to PAWS sometime soon.

Mammoliti said he and Berardinetti will pay their own way.

It will mark the second trip there for Berardinetti, who visited PAWS with Coun. Raymond Cho last year and gave the sanctuary a thumbs-up.

A major sticking point is the disclosure of medical records from PAWS, along with the zoo's concerns over possible tuberculosis exposure among elephants there.

The zoo has asked for tuberculosis status reports on all wildlife at PAWS, which goes beyond a Feb. 9 legal agreement between PAWS and the zoo.

A source said that part of the problem with PAWS handing over the records is confidentiality agreements with other institutions that sent their animals to the sanctuary. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Province hit with $14 million wrongful conviction lawsuit

Lawsuit. Targets Ottawa's police services board, two retired cops, attorney general

Romeo Phillion, a Toronto man who served nearly 32 years in prison following a wrongful murder conviction in 1972, has launched a $14-million lawsuit against the Ontario government.

Phillion alleges the province's attorney general, as well as the Ottawa Police Services Board and John Andrew McCombie and Stephen Nadori, two retired detectives who worked on the decades-old case, "wrongfully, intentionally, maliciously and lacking bona fides conspired" in his prosecution, according to a 68-page statement of claim filed last week.

"I didn't do 32 years for nothing," the 73-year-old said Thursday from his Mississauga townhouse.

Phillion, who is believed to have served more prison time than any other wrongfully convicted person, said he faces a litany of health problems, including emphysema and lung disease, for which he requires an oxygen tank.

Quoted

"I lost my freedom. Somebody's got to pay for that."

Romeo Phillion, who served more than three decades in prison for a wrongful murder conviction

The Crown quashed Phillion's conviction citing an undisclosed 1968 police report written by McCombie. The report confirmed Phillion's earlier alibi, locating him at a Trenton service station, 288 kilometres from Ottawa, two hours before the crime.

Upon his arrest, however, Phillion confessed to the crime. He later recanted, claiming it was a silly attempt to impress his gay lover Neil Miller.

The lawsuit alleges that police "orchestrated" witness statements to support Phillion's confession, even though they were aware of his claims of innocence.

David Robins, Phillion's Windsor-based lawyer, said his client is "entitled to be compensated for the miscarriage of justice he suffered."

"It would be nice to have him in a situation where he could enjoy the remaining years of his life without financial worry," Robins said.

The province will defend the claim, but declined to comment on the allegations. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Parade of vehicles line the street in hopes of free gasoline

Lured by the promise of free gas, motorists form a line that stretched over two kilometres just east of a Shell gas station at 2498 Gerrard St. East Thursday morning. Drivers who pulled up to the pump were given up to $100 of a new nitrogen-enriched gasoline that's supposed to help protect car engines from gunk. The event was supposed to last 90 minutes but was extended to two and a half hours. COLIN MC CONNELL/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Halton. Former police dispatcher charged with sexual assault

A former Halton police dispatcher is charged with sexually assaulting two women he worked with.

One of the alleged victims is a civilian dispatcher, the other a detective. The assaults are said to have happened a year apart and both women claim they were at a man's home in southwest Hamilton when he forced them to have sex. The dispatcher said she was watching a movie with the man when the alleged attack occurred. He told her his wife was at work and his children were locked in their bedrooms upstairs so they wouldn't interrupt.

Last July, Gary Church, 39, was charged with two counts of sexual assault.

Fire. Bedbug reports delay finding rooms for displaced residents

Efforts to find hotel rooms for people displaced by the highrise fire at 200 Wellesley Street were hindered by unsubstantiated concerns about bedbugs, Toronto's ombudsman says.

The Sept. 24, 2010, fire forced 1,700 residents from the city-owned Toronto Community Housing building. Many were put up at two reception centres over the weekend.

On Sept. 27, efforts began to move people to hotels, but that hit a glitch by mid-afternoon when a public health inspector issued an e-mail warning that residents might have bedbugs, says the report by ombudsman Fiona Crean.

The report quotes an unnamed public health inspector as saying in an e-mail: "Bedbugs may present as a problem for both patrons and workers. Any person may bring bedbugs on them if they came from a heavily infested unit prior to the fire."

Three hours later, an official leading the city's response indicated, erroneously, in an e-mail that the public health department had found bedbugs at the reception centre.

Awards spotlight the city's best and worst new buildings

Pug Awards. With Toronto in the midst of a building boom, there are plenty of options — from the stunning to the strange — to choose from

Take them at their creative monikers and some of Toronto's newest buildings are apparently blissful, mystical, maybe even built of precious crystal.

But whether Bliss Condominiums, iLoft at Mystic Pointe and Crystal Blu are soft on Torontonians' eyes has yet to be determined.

The buildings are among 44 in the running for best and worst of 2011 in the eighth annual Pug Awards, a public-opinion barometer of new Toronto architecture.

Throughout the month of May, online voters will decide whether they love or hate the city's 12 new commercial buildings — including the St. Michael's Hospital Li Ka Shing Knowledge Institute and the Ritz-Carlton — and 32 residential structures.

All buildings completed in 2011 which span an area greater than 50,000 square feet are automatically entered in the contest.

The Crystal Blu condo is among 44 nominees for the best and worst Toronto buildings of 2011 in the 8th annual Pug Awards. CONTRIBUTED

About 50,000 votes were cast in last year's contest.

"It's indicative of the fact that we're going through a building boom," Gary Berman, president of real estate finance company Tricon Capital Group and co-founder of the Pug Awards, said of the contest's high participation rate and growing public interest in new architecture.

Berman didn't want to offer predictions for this year's winners and losers — the Pugs are about the public's opinion, not those of experts, he said.

But he has a personal favourite in the Ritz-Carlton building ("a very elegant, beautiful addition to our skyline") and says there are "many contenders for the ugliest building," particularly in the residential category.

Past winners include the Royal Conservatory TELUS Centre for Performance and Learning and the TIFF Bell Lightbox.

The Shops at Don Mills, the Scarborough Gospel Temple and the Mount Sinai Joseph and Wolf Lebovic Centre have been shamefully dubbed worst buildings of the year in past contests.

Ford. Mayor facing yet another conduct probe

Mayor Rob Ford is facing a probe of his conduct related to personal criticism he and his brother levelled at Toronto's top public health official on their Newstalk 1010 radio show.

Dr. David McKeown, the medical officer of health, raised their ire by proposing that Toronto lower speed limits city-wide to 30 km/h on residential streets and 40 km/h on all others as part of a package of initiatives to make cycling and walking safer.

Ford quickly dismissed the idea as "nuts, nuts, nuts," and then, last Sunday on the radio show, took aim at McKeown himself, calling the official's $290,000 salary "embarrassing" and promising to "look into it."

Councillor Doug Ford, calling in from Florida, asked: "Why does he still have a job?"

Councillor John Filion, chair of the board of health, called the Fords' comments "highly inappropriate" at a meeting Monday and hinted at taking action against them unless they apologized to McKeown.

Ford's outbursts tarnishing Toronto's image: Expert

Bad rep? Mayor's threat to stop talking to media if a reporter he accuses of spying on him is there might be crossing the line, observers say

Toronto's reputation is increasingly undermined by the antics of its bombastic mayor, some political observers and insiders warned a day after Rob Ford's latest clash with the media.

The embattled mayor faced off Wednesday evening with a reporter he accuses of spying on his home, the second time he has called police to intervene when members of the media have come calling at his west-end house.

The feud continued Thursday as the mayor pushed to have Toronto Star reporter Daniel Dale charged by police and removed from covering city hall. Ford then told a radio station he wouldn't speak to any media in Dale's presence.

The incident reignited a heated debate over Ford's often tense dealings with the media, in particular the Star, and prompted some — including at least one city councillor — to question his judgment.

Coun. Shelley Carroll, who has frequently butted heads with the mayor, said his chronic "overreactions" are drawing jokes and eye rolls in political circles outside the city.

"It's the conversation opener" when meeting officials across Canada and even parts of the U.S., she said Thursday.

Wednesday's incident "takes us into the realm of — one could almost say — international embarrassment," she added.

Graham White, a political science professor at the University of Toronto, said Ford's blunders have given the city "a really bad image" beyond simple ridicule. Unlike former mayor Mel Lastman, whose many gaffes both irritated and charmed the public, Ford "is coming across as a thug," a far more alarming reputation, he said. The mayor's threatened media blackout is "absolutely appalling," White said. That it came on World Press Freedom Day adds a note of irony to an otherwise troubling development, he added.

Social media was abuzz Thursday as the public weighed in on the controversy, with many mocking the mayor for losing his cool. "For sheer entertainment value, this is a Golden Age in Toronto civic politics. But, My God, Rob Ford is a knob!" tweeted one Vancouver man.

Others rushed to the mayor's defence. "Sorry, I'm with Mayor Ford on this one. The Toronto Star crossed the line completely," a Toronto man wrote on Twitter.

Neither Ford nor his brother Coun. Doug Ford were immediately available for comment.

Police have launched an investigation into the incident, which began when a neighbour saw someone he said appeared to be in the mayor's backyard with a recording device.

The Star said Dale was on public property next to Ford's home. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Eye rolling

"The people who are rolling their eyes ... are probably people who may not have voted for him in the first place."

Melanee Thomas, a political expert with Queen's University, who said the controversy will only cement the public's perception of Ford, whether for or against him

Tories undersold price of F-35s: Budget officer

Fighter jet fiasco. The Harper government is continuing to get slammed over the high costs of the F-35s

The Conservative government wanted the public to believe the F-35 program was cheaper than it was actually going to be, says the parliamentary budget officer.

Kevin Page took the opportunity Thursday to refresh his long-standing criticism of the proposed multi-billion dollar purchase with an appearance before the House of Commons public accounts committee. It came just weeks after the auditor general accused National Defence and Public Works of misleading Parliament over the program.

Conservative MPs took turns trying to rip apart the assumptions, economic models and research that went into Page's March, 2011 report and its startling conclusion that the plan to buy 65 stealth fighters would cost $29 billion, not the $14.7 billion reported by Defence.

The auditor general pegged the total cost of the program at $25 billion.

"I think what we need to get in place, so we can really enhance trust in this country, is the kind of information that goes to cabinet to support decisions also goes to parliamentarians," Page said.

Witnesses detail island shootings

Anders Breivik trial.
Mass murderer, in black suit and grey tie, shows no emotion as ferry captain gives testimony

Witnesses recounted Thursday how mass murderer Anders Behring Breivik — armed and in police uniform — managed to trick his way onto a ferry to Utoya island, where he massacred 69 people in a shooting spree just hours after killing eight people in a bomb attack.

Jon Olson, captain of the MS Thorbjoern ferry, told the Oslo District Court about his "angst and full panic" as he frantically tried to contact police about the attack after his ferry had docked at Utoya.

Breivik has admitted to the bombing in Oslo's government district and the shootings at a Labor Party youth camp on Utoya. He claims the July 22 attacks were "necessary" and that the 77 victims had betrayed Norway by embracing immigration.

Olson, who lost his partner, Monica Boesei, the second person to die in the shootings, said neither he nor his crew suspected Breivik. Witnesses described Breivik as composed and behaving normally as he arrived from the car-bomb attack in central Oslo. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Norway — Day 11 of trial

Breivik has said that being declared insane would be the worst thing that could happen to him because it would "delegitimize" his views.

Saving a life — one tweet at a time

Finding a donor.
Woman with genetic condition believes social media can help spread the word about donating bone marrow

LIA GRAINGER
For Metro

Cristina Di Corte remembers the day she found out she had mitochondrial neurogastrointestinal encephalopathy — it was the same day she learned that a bone marrow transplant could save her life. It was also the beginning of an ambitious coast-to-coast social media campaign to find a donor match.

"It was really scary to finally find out what I have," says the 22-year-old Mississauga native of that day last November.

If you've never heard of the disease, also known by its acronym MNGIE, you're not alone. The genetic condition has only ever been diagnosed in 70 people worldwide and is so rare that most doctors have never heard of it.

Di Corte first started noticing symptoms when she was 17, but it would be four years before she was accurately diagnosed. The condition affects the muscles that move material through the digestive system, so much of what Di Corte ate would sit in her system and rot. A hairdresser at Erin Mills Town Centre, she became so exhausted that she was unable to work.

"I was nauseous, throwing up, and had horrible stomach pains," says Di Corte. Already a naturally slim woman at 98 pounds, her weight dropped to as low as 68 pounds. A series of doctors and specialists misdiagnosed her with irritable bowel syndrome, tested her for celiac disease and colon cancer, and even sent her to a clinic for people with eating disorders.

To finally be able to name the disease was little comfort though, as it came with the news that she would need a bone marrow transplant.

"I basically need it as soon as possible," says Di Corte, who now receives nutrients through a central catheter line and is back up to 80 pounds. Unfortunately, her mother, father and brother are not matches. Di Corte is registered with OneMatch.ca, a stem cell and marrow donor network, but they warned her that the list is long.

OneMatch.ca

All that's required to register with Canada's stem cell and marrow network is a simple, non-invasive cheek swab — and you don't even need to see a doctor to do it.

- Individuals can go to OneMatch.ca and order a free swab kit. A YouTube video explains how to take the swab and then the samples are simply popped back in the mail, postage paid.

That's when her older brother had an idea. "He was like, why don't we put this on Facebook?" says Di Corte.

A Facebook event asked friends and family to tweet #hopeforcristina on Twitter every Wednesday at 6 p.m., and the call has been a trending topic in Canada three times. She also has her own website, Helpingcristina.org, and it wasn't long before Di Corte was telling her story on Citytv.

"I think if more young people knew about OneMatch and how easy it is to be tested, they would register," says Di Corte. "You could save someone's life."

Cristina Di Corte explains her condition during an interview with Citytv in this screen grab. CONTRIBUTED

Dozens killed in failed market robbery

Nigeria. Country is already under constant attack by radical Islamists

Robbers angered by a crowd burning one of their colleagues alive attacked a cattle market in northeast Nigeria, killing at least 34 people in the latest violence fanning across the bloodied region, witnesses and an official said Thursday.

The violence began Wednesday, as witnesses said gunmen started shooting at the market in Potiskum, a city 575 kilometres northeast of Nigeria's central capital, Abuja. Three people were killed in the ensuing gunfire, which ended when the attackers ran out of ammunition, witnesses said.

All but one of the gunmen escaped. Those gathered in the market beat the gunmen left behind before dousing him in gasoline and lighting him on fire, a punishment still meted out by mobs in a nation where few trust the under-equipped and corrupt federal police force.

As the market closed for the night, the gunmen returned, setting fire to cattle-holding pens and cars parked around the area. Potiskum General Hospital, the only major medical facility in the town, took in 34 corpses from the attack, an official there said. About a dozen charred corpses were seen lining an open-air morgue.

Cause of the clashes

Cattle raids remain common across the north, as herdsmen lead teams across the arid plains to the market.

- While attacks there often cuts across ethnic and religious lines, the root of the violence often comes back to grazing rights and political power.

Wallet found 63 years later helps to reunite family

Lost and Found.
Blog post helps track down billfold owner's family, which was sealed inside antique cabinet

MATT KIELTYKA
Metro in Vancouver

The discovery of a 63-year-old wallet in Whistler, B.C., has bridged generations, connected families and given store owner Lorna Van Straaten one amazing story to tell.

The owner of Whistler's Re-Build-It Centre found the wallet, belonging to a Donald Milford Townsend of Burbank, Calif., in a sealed compartment of a fetching black antique cabinet she had just sold.

The contents — including a driver's licence, union card, family photos and a silver coin — astounded her and sent her on a memorable quest to find the man's family.

"Some of the things we find (in her two antique shops) are beyond description.

"We get lots of really cool items, but in terms of family sentimental value this tops them all," Van Straaten told Metro.

The store owner posted the contents of the wallet and her story on her blog, reuseitwhistler.blogspot.com, in an attempt to track down Townsend's family.

Within a day, Van Straaten had been able to connect with Townsend's cousin, grandson and great nephew.

Townsend himself had died in 2005.

Aside from being an astounding find, the wallet ended up reuniting the relatives.

"They had been out of touch for a while and they told me this has reunited them on a level," said Van Straaten. "It's really a feel-good story about family and connection and the power of the Internet. Without it, I would have never found (the family)."

The wallet, its contents and the cabinet are now being returned to the family.

A postage stamp and blood-donor card were among items recently found in a wallet in Whistler dating back to 1949.

RIM shares plunge to near decade low

Market. BlackBerry maker's shares collapse to below $12 after reports suggested the company would ditch physical keyboard

BlackBerry 10 Dev Alpha developer testing device. RESEARCH IN MOTION HANDOUT

The Canadian company that revolutionized the mobile phone industry spent a very expensive week trying to sell the idea that the BlackBerry isn't a dying technology, only to see its share price close Thursday at its lowest level in nearly a decade.

Research In Motion stock fell 72 cents, or 5.7 per cent, to close at $11.91 on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

It hasn't been below $12 since 2003.

Thursday's plunge marked three days of declines that began after the Waterloo, Ont., tech giant gave a first glimpse of its much-anticipated new operating software at its annual developer conference in Orlando, Fla.

The BlackBerry 10 OS prototype was handed to developers in the hope of getting them onside and writing applications for the system, but it won't hit the market for several months.

RIM's shares have fallen some 15 per cent since Tuesday's reveal of the operating system. At its height the stock was trading at more than $144 in 2008, when RIM was briefly the most valuable company on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

During the conference, RIM chief executive Thorsten Heins was forced to confront rumours that the new BlackBerry would feature only a touchscreen keyboard and not a physical keypad.

The confusion arose after Heins unveiled the new operating system and focused on some flashy features available to touchscreen users, but didn't address any future plans for keypad devices. Some reports suggested the company would completely ditch the physical keys that helped build its name and are favoured by many of its users.

"We won't lose the focus on physical keypads. It would be wrong, just plain wrong to do this," Heins said.

At this point, it's hard to tell whether the event either helped or hurt the company in the long run, but judging by RIM's volatile stock, investors aren't impressed yet.

BlackBerry 10 is seen as an important part of RIM's attempt to compete against the likes of the iPhone and devices using Google's Android operating system. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Keystone. Pipeline still on the table: Post

TransCanada won't confirm a report in the Washington Post that it will reapply for its controversial Keystone XL pipeline as soon as Friday.

A person familiar with TransCanada's plans spoke to the Post on the condition of anonymity because a formal announcement has not yet been made, the newspaper said Thursday.

CEO Russ Girling told reporters following TransCanada's annual general meeting last Friday that the new application is "imminent." Company spokesman Terry Cunha said Thursday that Girling's comment still stands, with no specific date being provided.

The Obama administration rejected the $7.6-billion US project earlier this year, though it left the door open for TransCanada to take another crack at it.

The White House says the decision had less to do with the Alberta-to-Texas pipeline's merits than moves by Republicans in Congress to speed up the process.

Google goes up against authors in court case

Google has urged a U.S. judge to toss The Authors Guild out of litigation over the future of the world's largest digital library.

Google lawyer told a judge Thursday that authors cannot be represented as a group because their interests are too varied.

The Author's Guild lawyer said it would be too expensive to force authors to fight Google individually.

The Manhattan judge did not immediately rule. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Facebook sets share price range for upcoming IPO

Facebook has set a price range of $28 US to $35 US for its initial public offering of stock.

At the high end, this could raise as much as $11.8 billion US. If the underwriters sell the extra stock reserved for over-allotments, the IPO will value Facebook at $79.3 billion US at the high end of the price range.

That's much higher than any other Internet IPO in the past, even Google in 2004, which raised $1.9 billion US. The range came in a regulatory filing Thursday.

After that, Facebook will go on an "IPO roadshow," where executives talk to potential investors about why they should invest in the stock. If all goes well, Facebook's stock is expected to price on May 17 and go public on May 18.

The IPO has been highly anticipated, not just because of how much money it will raise, but because Facebook itself is so popular. The world's largest online social network has more than 900 million users worldwide.

CEO Mark Zuckerberg has emerged as a wunderkind leader who's led Facebook through unprecedented growth from its start as a hangout for Harvard students. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

YouTube puts on show for advertisers

YouTube. Video site introduces new specialized channels, pledges funding to woo advertisers

In a flashy presentation to advertisers, YouTube promoted its new channels of original programming, while pledging to spend $200 million to help market them.

That's roughly twice what the Google Inc.-owned video site has spent launching some 100 channels of niche-oriented programming. The channels are an ambitious initiative from YouTube, approximately halfway through its rollout.

YouTube hyped the initiative Wednesday night at New York's Beacon Theatre, where it urged advertisers to purchase spots alongside its new programs. It was YouTube's first "upfront," an annual TV tradition of getting advertisers to purchase ads to their upcoming programming slates.

Robert Kyncl, YouTube's global head of content, pledged that YouTube will spend more than $200 million to market the channels across Google and its advertising network. After years of relying largely on user-created videos, YouTube has increasingly focused on partnering with premium content providers to lure audiences for longer viewings and attract advertisers with higher quality videos.

YouTube also announced three new channels, including one called Wigs that will focus on scripted dramas for women. It's created by producer Jon Avnet (Black Swan, Fried Green Tomatoes) and director Rodrigo Garcia (Albert Nobbs, In Treatment) and features the actresses Virginia Madsen, Julia Stiles and Jennifer Beals.

Surprise Guest

YouTube concluded their event with a surprise performance from Jay-Z, who created the YouTube channel Life and Times.

Also newly announced is a TeamUSA channel from the U.S. Olympic Committee that will feature content ahead of the 2012 games. Tribeca Enterprises, the parent company of the Tribeca Film Festival, is also creating a channel in partnership with YouTube veteran Maker Studios. That channel, dubbed the Picture Show, will debut later this year.

The event was the last in a two-week series from digital companies, including Hulu and Yahoo. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Samsung's iPhone competitor

Samsung's latest Galaxy phone, pictured, will have a high-definition touch screen that's nearly twice the size of the iPhone, while being thinner and lighter.

The Galaxy line has emerged as the biggest competitor to the iPhone. Samsung said the Galaxy S III will go on sale in Europe on May 29 and in the U.S. this summer. The Korean company showed off the phone Thursday at an event in London.

Like previous Galaxy phones, the S III will run Google Inc.'s Android software. The processor, or "brains" of the device, will be upgraded to include four computing cores. The iPhone and most other high-end phones are "dual-core."

IT'S SNOOKI CALLING THE POT BLACK

THE LIST
Mike Benhaim
Metro

1 Same old story: You know the one — lady's philandering husband spends all her money, then leaves for a hotter, richer woman. Spurned lady spends a year feeling dirty and used, and just when she's begun to move on, he returns with flowers and playful charms. Still vulnerable, she crumbles, and her friends throw up their arms saying, "He's not even that good looking." In other news, Conrad Black returns to Canada.

2 Let it be written: As an example of necessity being the "mother of invention," researchers at Arizona State University have released a list of "commandments" for Facebook. Issues covered by the rules: acknowledging postings to your page by clicking "Like," inappropriate "poking" (never wise), and posting pictures of friends from a debauched weekend in Vegas. My favourite edict, not limited to FB, is "Thou shalt use common sense," which, ironically, supersedes a need for the list to begin with.

3 Carrot caution: A study released Wednesday out of Ohio University has found that consuming excessive amounts of beta carotene might not be good for you. Contrary to what we've been told for centuries, it can block some effects of vitamin A critical to vision, skin health, metabolism and immune function. Vision? It goes to show you just can't trust your mom anymore.

4 Playing hardball: Two years after Victoria's Secret combined two of men's favourite things by releasing their line of baseball-themed lingerie, they introduce the Blue Jays collection. With two types of sexy briefs (one leopard print), and two skimpy tees, they've given new meaning to the phrase "Sliding into home."

5 United we stand: Canadian awards shows the Genies and the Geminis, are joining forces to create just one all-encompassing program. This is great news for apathetic Canadians who now only have to not watch one show.

6 Labour days: Jessica Simpson has given birth to a 22-inch, nine-pound, 13-ounce baby girl. This explains the tremendous baby bump that prompted pregnant Jersey Shore star Nicole "Snooki" Polizzi to say, "I'd die if I ever got that big." Aw, Snooki, we don't want you to die. We just want you to go away. Gone.

7 Hoops! My bad: Some are saying the stress of the condensed NBA season has resulted in a post-season riddled with injuries. None more symbolic than when Knicks' Amare Stoudemire tempered the burning flames of his competitive passion after a brutal loss to Miami by punching a fire extinguisher. Someone might have mentioned requiring the hand to play out the series. Surprisingly, Amare skipped college to go pro.

8 Canadian courtship: Our nation's first TV Bachelor is CFL wide receiver Brad Smith, who can't wait to meet all the wonderful women who will join him in this consummate quest for love. He seeks independent, intelligent women who are "just as confident in a ponytail and sweats as they are all dressed up." And adds that high-maintenance women turn him off. Relax, Brad. Any intelligent woman willing to endure weeks of public judgment, cat fights and drama, all to potentially marry a CFL player, is probably not high-maintenance.

Edvard Munch

Work of art sells for historic price

NEW YORK. Edvard Munch's The Scream made history on Wednesday night when it became the most expensive piece of art ever sold at auction.

After a fierce bidding war at Sotheby's New York, the 1895 pastel went to an anonymous buyer for $119.9 million US. The auction house was thrilled at the "historic" price on a night when sales topped $330 million US.

Simon Shaw, the head of impressionist and modern art for Sotheby's, said the painting was a good deal.

"If ever there was a work of art of true shock and awe, it is Edvard Munch's The Scream, which is not only one of the seminal images from art history, but also one of the visual keys to the modern consciousness."

The work is one of four versions by the Norwegian expressionist artist and was the only one still privately owned.

It is regarded as the most prized of the four as a poem written by the artist is on the frame.

Scream-worthy poetry

"I was walking along the road with two friends. The Sun was setting — The Sky turned a bloody red And I felt a whiff of Melancholy — I stood Still, deathly tired — over the blue-black Fjord and City hung Blood and Tongues of Fire. My Friends walked on — I remained behind — shivering with Anxiety. I felt the great Scream in Nature."

Munch's poem written in blood red paint

What can you buy with $120 million US?

- 60,000 classic British telephone boxes
- 20,000 tigers
- 40 Stradivarius violins
- 15 light jets
- Six holidays at the International Space Station
- One Cristiano Ronaldo

60 seconds

Modern art specialist Philip Hook

Why has this work of art been so popular?

It's one of the most important pictures ever in terms of fame and familiarity because it captures the modern man with his angst and alienation. It marked a new phase at the start of the 20th century when artists began portraying their own emotions.

What moral lessons can be found in it?

There is a comment on man's relationship with nature, but also it is based on guilt. When Munch painted this his father had just died and his sister was in a lunatic asylum.

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Putting the 'super' in superhero films

Roundup. Richard Crouse and Mark Breslin dish on their favourite vigilante features

Richard: Mark, even though the ads guaranteed I would believe a man could fly, I'm not sure that my fifteen-year-old self actually thought Christopher Reeve was circling the earth in Superman: The Movie, but I do know I thought it was cool. And still do. I've seen it dozens of times and its blend of humour, action and nostalgia is worth its weight in Kryptonite.

Mark: The first Superman movie was the platinum standard in superhero films: graceful, even poetic. The sequels ruined its goodwill, but the quality of the original cannot be denied. But I think the world can be divided into two kinds of people: Superman people and Batman people, and I, Richard, seem to be a Batman person. Even the weakest in the Batman franchise still enthralls me; if we're talking about Christopher Nolan's The Dark Knight, we may be talking Godfather-level cinema.

RC: Of the big name superheroes we haven't mentioned Spider-Man yet. I liked the first Sam Raimi web slinger movie, complete with Tobey Maguire and the upside down kiss, but even cooler is Darkman. Raimi created the Darkman character out of frustration after failing to get the screen rights to The Shadow and Batman. Liam Neeson plays the swashbuckling hero in this violent and funny movie.

MB: Darkman is a dark horse entry, but yes, it's a good one and Neeson is fantastic in it. Wish I could share your enthusiasm for Spider-Man but I spent the entire movie wishing the dweeb would grow a pair. More like Spider-Boy to me. The series I prefer is the X-Men franchise, which seems to get more sophisticated with each release. And the Wolverine spin-off is a definite fave.

RC: I liked Wolverine's R-rated cameo in X-Men: First Class. Cool, underrated movie and his unfit-for-publication-in-a-family-paper-line is very memorable. Also memorable are a few movies about a lesser tier of superheroes. Everyone knows Batman and Superman, but how about Captain Invisible, the alcoholic hero who comes out of hiding to save America from destruction? Or the strange and funny Orgazmo from the twisted minds of South Park's Matt Stone and Trey Parker?

MB: And what about the lonely comic book superheroes never immortalized on film? When, oh when, will they make that masterpiece starring The Flash??? The scene where he'd do his taxes in three seconds flat would be worth the price of admission!

Synopsis

Lately it seems you couldn't swing Thor's hammer in a theatre without hitting a superhero movie, like this weekend's The Avengers, but movies about caped crusaders and heroes who can leap buildings in a single bound are nothing new. This week the Reel Guys use their superhuman powers to pick the best superhero movies of all time.

Scene in brief

D'Angelo sparkles

D'Angelo is making his comeback: the reclusive singer will give his first U.S. performance in 10 years at the 2012 Essence Music Festival. D'Angelo will perform during the festival's opening night. It runs from July 6 to July 8 in New Orleans and also features Trey Songz, Aretha Franklin, Mary J. Blige and many others. The soul singer's latest album is 2000's Voodoo. It went platinum and won two Grammy Awards, including best R&B album. His debut, 1995's Brown Sugar, was also a platinum effort. Since that, D'Angelo has stepped away from the music scene, drawing attention for his run-ins with the law.

When art imitates life

Edwin Boyd: Citizen Gangster. Kevin Durand talks about the distant relationship with his co-star and fictional partner in crime

RICHARD CROUSE
scene@metronews.ca

Kevin Durand left, says that he and co-star Scott Speedman had a relationship similar to their characters. HANDOUT

On the set of Edwin Boyd: Citizen Gangster art imitated life.

The story of legendary Canadian bank robbers Edwin Boyd and Lenny Jackson is ripe with daring stick-ups, jailbreaks and gunfights, but despite a criminal partnership that made both men household names they weren't close.

"On a personal level I don't think there was a whole lot of love there," says Kevin Durand, who plays Jackson in the film.

"They dealt with things in a different way. Lenny and Edwin had very different ways of approaching their job."

Durand and co-star Scott Speedman, who plays Boyd, manifested that aloofness to create their characters on the Sault Ste. Marie set.

"We definitely had respect for one another and we liked each other but we didn't go out of our way to hang out together," Durand says.

"It was interesting in the way it panned out because I ended up spending a lot of time with Val and Wille, (Joseph Cross and Brendan Fletcher). Those were my guys and we literally became the gang. It was incredible because we were holed up in the north, in the cold, in our little hotel rooms and we became this little tribe of ... I want to say thieves but we didn't go thieving, but it felt very real."

The story may have come to life for Durand on set, but he was unaware of the Boyd Gang's exploits before he read the script. "I was really taken aback at how famous they were to another generation," he says. "My Uncle Tom filled me in at a discussion at a family dinner. He knew all about it and was really excited about me playing Lenny."

His uncle vividly remembered the gang's early fifties heyday. "My uncle said, 'My God, we were so terrified. I remember hiding in my bedroom hoping that the Boyd Gang wasn't going to come in my window and rob me and kill me.'"

Lenny and Edwin may have been bad guys, but that's not exactly how Durand sees them.

"The thing about these guys, like most bad guys, is that they are human and they are a product of their environment and their time," he says. "You see them in the movie with their loved ones and you see the poetry of their lives."

The Avengers

Director. Joss Whedon

Stars. Robert Downey Jr., Chris Evans, Scarlett Johansson

Great comic book movies, like great comic books, have to play their heroes and villains straight. The stakes have to be high and in the case of Marvel's The Avengers, the fate of the planet literally hangs in the balance. The humour is innately there (a bunch of costumed superheroes hanging out together is already absurd) but in director Joss Whedon's mammoth budgeted blockbuster, the humour is of the nudging, winking variety, almost as if Whedon is trying to convince the audience that he's smarter than the material. It's an obnoxious trait that bogs down what could have been a perfect mash up.

CHRIS ALEXANDER

Comedy

The Best Exotic Marigold Hotel

Director. John Madden

Stars. Judi Dench, Bill Nighy, Dev Patel, Maggie Smith

Madden's elegant comedy is of the charming, gentle sort, following a handful of seniors that heads off to a tony hotel for the "Elderly & Beautiful" in India. Tony it's not, but there are life lessons to be had, fresh starts and sexual rebirths amidst the lively sensuality of India. Plucky pensioners face down mortality with humour, compassion and a vow to live life better lives minus hokey feel good artifice. The top drawer cast does the bittersweet subject matter justice.

ANNE BRODIE

Thriller

Headhunters

Director. Morten Tyldum

Stars. Aksell Hennie, Nikolaj Coster-Waldau

In Headhunters, a cocky recruitment consultant-by day / art thief by night thinks he has the perfect heist planned for an expensive Rubes portrait. That is, until he finds himself hunted by the painting's owner — a tracking expert with the technological slickness of a Bond villain. A furious pace, dark humour and a gripping performance from Norwegian star Aksell Hennie all compensate for the slightly too tidy conclusion.

STEVE GOW

Drama

Detachment

Director. Tony Kaye

Stars. Adrien Brody, James Caan

Eccentric filmmaker Tony Kaye (American History X) returns with a bleak drama about a substitute teacher (Adrien Brody) so detached from society, it actually makes him a more effectual educator to a bunch of brats — until he's forced to face a dying grandfather and a teen prostitute. While melodramatic moments of unstable faculty losing their cool and odd scraps of animation seem misplaced, Brody's work in Detachment demands attention.

ANNE BRODIE

Quoted

"It did actually really scare me to step into this world and I didn't know that I could pull it off. It took some convincing from people like (co-star) Robert (Downey Jr.) and Joss. The thing that I was always worried about was just getting pigeon-holed by a big part like this. But now I'm at a point where I have a big enough body of work where this isn't going to make me or break me, really. It'll help, in a lot of ways."

Mark Ruffalo, talking about stepping into the role of the Hulk in The Avengers.

All about cults

Brit Marling's Sound of My Voice follows a pair of documentary filmmakers (Christopher Denham and Nicole Vicius) going undercover to expose a cult led by the dialysis-dependent, enigmatic Maggie (Marling), who claims to be from the future. The film is an intriguing look at the power plays and mind games involved in indoctrination, leading the viewer to question exactly what is and isn't true. But it's not the first cinematic look at cults. We decided to see how it stacks up against some of our favourites.

NED EHRBAR
METRO WORLD NEWS IN HOLLYWOOD

1 Sound of my voice

Plot: Filmmakers Peter and Lorna set out to expose Maggie, but risk getting wrapped up in her world.

Type of cult: Messianic

Goal: Preparing for the coming food shortages and disasters Maggie insists are imminent.

Armed?: They have at least one handgun.

2 Martha Marcy May Marlene

Plot: A young woman (Elizabeth Olsen) escapes a rural, cult-like community but is haunted by her experiences there.

Type of cult: Familial, not specifically religious

Goal: Farming, fornicating and total subjugation to its enigmatic, folk singer leader, Patrick (John Hawkes)

Armed?: Yup. Olsen's Martha/Marcy May is even encouraged to shoot a fellow cult member whose allegiance appears to be waning.

3 Fight Club

Plot: A depressed man (Edward Norton) seeks excitement and release through a bare-knuckle boxing group that quickly spirals into something bigger.

Type of cult: Non-religious, militaristic

Goal: Fighting, resuscitating masculinity, gleefully destroying modern society and the financial system, making soap.

Armed?: Oh yes. With tons of homemade explosives.

4 Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom

Plot: Harrison Ford's intrepid archeologist stumbles upon a dangerous cult looking to take over the world with the help of some mystical stones.

Type of cult: Religious

Goal: Human sacrifice, slavery and forced child labour.

Armed?: Does a guy who can rip your heart out of your chest count?

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

Seriously Ashton, that's just plain racist

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Poor Popchips. They just wanted to get people to eat their unique snack food (a.k.a. communion wafers with salt) but their recent online ad campaign is backfiring spectacularly.

The face of the campaign, Ashton Kutcher, is currently facing criticism for his roles in the commercials that many feel are racist, according to E! News. In the online video, Kutcher appears as numerous ridiculous characters, including Raj, a brown-faced Bollywood producer with a thick Indian accent. (Kutcher also appears as a character sending up Karl Lagerfeld that could be construed as homophobic.)

Overwhelmingly negative responses to the advertisement prompted Popchips to remove it from YouTube and Facebook a day after it was released.

"The new Popchips worldwide dating video and ad campaign featuring four characters was created to provoke a few laughs and was never intended to stereotype or offend anyone," a company rep said in a statement to the Hollywood Reporter.

Here's the thing someone should have told Popchips: Kutcher can't act. At all. His version of "acting" is basically over the top parody — all the time. So when he gets tapped to portray someone of a different race, even in a comedic role, of course it will be seen as mockery/racism. The only actor who could tackle this without getting in trouble? Sir Ben Kingsley. Popchips, get that guy on the phone ASAP.

Amber Riley strikes back

Let's hear it for Glee star Amber Riley. After a red carpet fainting spell earlier in the week, she's on the (hilarious) defensive about her personal life — including whether or not she's expecting.

"Let me stop the rumour mill right now. I'm not pregnant. Yes, I'm black but I don't have diabetes, I don't starve myself to fit clothes; I buy clothes to fit me not vice versa," Riley posted to Twitter in response to the rumours that sprouted up overnight after her episode.

"I did get a great laugh this morning reading all the BS, though."

Cut it out Cameron, it's just some hair

A recent rushed visit to a hairdresser friend left Cameron Diaz with much shorter locks than expected — and tears in her eyes.

"I started crying. I felt so vulnerable. For a woman to all of a sudden have no hair — oh my God," she tells Jay Leno during an interview. "There was a little misunderstanding. I said I just want a little bit cut off."

But a bit quickly turned into a bob, which turned traumatic for all involved.

"She started crying. I started crying. A couple other people started crying. I ended up writing her a few emails over the next few days assuring her I was OK," Diaz says.

Celebration

Cinco de Mayo celebrates the victory of the Mexican Army over the French at the Battle of Puebla in 1862. Celebrations include not only wonderful Mexican foods, but also parades, mariachi music and folk dancing.
Traditional Mexican cuisine varies vastly from region to region in Mexico.
The earliest Mexican agricultural staples were beans, squash and chili peppers, with corn arriving some 2,000 years later. Staples expanded to include avocados, coconuts, tomatoes, sweet potatoes, peanuts, chia seeds, and more varieties of beans.
Early traditional dishes included atole (porridge), tortilla, tamales (filled pastries, both savory and sweet) and soups. The cuisine has expanded to include a wide variety of dishes way beyond burritos, tacos and salsa.

I've had a long standing respect for tequila, but the distilled output of agave plants is by no means the only booze stamped "Made in Mexico".

With Cinco de Mayo celebrations a day away and Salma Hayek shilling for Burger King, south of the border (the American one at least) things are heating up.

Sadly, the country's superstar brand — Corona Extra (6x330 ml, $12.95 - $14.09) — gets a bum rap from beer aficionados thanks to its lean-bodied flavour and clear glass bottle (which fanatics swear allows natural light to affect its flavour).

Whatever you believe, Corona is a great beer to have with any food that's eclectic — especially if it's spicy.

Of course, the last thing I would do is allow a bartender to jam a wedge of lime into any Corona bottle I've ordered. They may seem to go together like Brad and Angelina but the union of lime and liquid really began as a way to keep flies out of an opened bottle. It turns out that the acidity in the citrus makes them bug off.

Carne Asada with Confetti Salsa. The combination of fruity salsa & marinated meat makes this the perfect Mexican meal

The more time the sirloin tips bathe in this recipe's punchy marinade of lime juice, Worcestershire sauce and garlic, the better. So while it calls for marinating the meat for about two hours, don't hesitate to toss them in as you head out to work in the morning. You'll be rewarded when you get home and crank up the grill.

To save time, you could substitute a mango or other fruity jarred salsa for the one made as part of this recipe. If you have time, this salsa is a chunky hodge-podge of bell pepper, tomatillos, avocado, mango, tomato and red onion, with a bit of heat from a chipotle chili in adobo.

1. In a large zip-close bag, combine the sirloin tips, lime juice, salt, Worcestershire sauce, olive oil, black pepper and garlic cloves. Shake to coat the meat. Refrigerate for two hours.

2. Meanwhile, in a large bowl combine the bell pepper, tomatillos, avocado, mango, tomato, red onion, chipotle, adobo sauce, garlic, lime juice and cilantro. Stir well, then season with salt and black pepper. Refrigerate for 30 minutes before serving.

3. When ready to cook the steak, heat a grill to high.

4. Drain the meat, discarding the marinade. Use paper towels to pat the meat dry. Sear on the grill, about four minutes per side for medium-rare. Serve with the confetti salsa.

Just Opened: The Oxley

At 121 Yorkville Avenue sits the just opened The Oxley, from the same owners as our favourite The Queen and Beaver. Featuring classic English cuisine — Scotch Eggs, anyone? — a beautiful patio in front of the building's bright red brick exterior, and some excellent beers and liqueurs, The Oxley is a welcome addition to the Yorkville neighbourhood.

Top 10 Event

What are 10 things you should know before you die? The Top 10 Event asks a set of ten influential and inspirational speakers to share their stories and insight on this burning question. This year's event is at the Winter Garden Theatre (189 Yonge Street) on May 10th, featuring speakers like former mayor David Miller, singer Jully Black, and celebrity chef David Rocco.

8th Annual Whiskey Gala

Roy Thompson Hall will house the 8th Annual Whiskey Gala aka Spirit of Toronto on May 12th, showcasing dozens of the world's best whiskeys, bourbons, scotches – whatever your preference – alongside blind tastings, demonstrations, cocktails designed by acclaimed Yuki Yamazaki and Kentaro Wada, and of course, the MasterClass series.

Just Opened: SPIRITHOUSE

SPIRITHOUSE opened quietly last week at 487 Adelaide Street W. (at Portland Street), bringing a fantasmical menu of exquisite cocktails to the after-work crowd. The space is a mix of speakeasy chic and sophisticated elegance. The small menu is styled to pair with the cocktails, not the other way around, and includes some superb share plates to complete your evening.

Just Opened: The Chickery

Celebrity Chef David Adjey's latest restaurant, at 130 Spadina Avenue, is all about chicken. No ... really. Offering up casual fast dining, and "real tasty chicken and sides." It opened officially on Tuesday, and judging by the buzz we've seen will have no problem attracting a crowd. It's an awesome new spot to grab, er, pluck a quick and delicious meal that's decidedly notable.

Marlies pull even with Heat on backs of Kadri, Scrivens

Nazem Kadri had a goal and two assists and Ben Scrivens made 37 saves as the Toronto Marlies beat the Abbotsford Heat 5-1 on Thursday to tie their AHL Western Conference semi-final at a game apiece.

Kadri rounded out Toronto's scoring with an empty-net goal with eight and a half minutes remaining. Abbotsford made the unorthodox move of going without a goalie when they were on a power play from about the midway mark of the third, and Kadri took advantage.

'It felt like it was never going to end'

NHL. New York and Washington rest up after gruelling triple overtime Game 3

The New York Rangers played what amounted to two games over two days just to get one win against the Washington Capitals.

Each team scored a goal in the second period, then skated the ice for the next 83 minutes before Marian Gaborik gave the Rangers a 2-1 victory at 14:41 of the third overtime to end the 20th longest game in the history of the Stanley Cup playoffs, a matchup that began Wednesday night and spilled into Thursday.

If it was the decisive game of the series, Rangers coach John Tortorella might have been more enthusiastic. Instead, he looked at the win for what it was: A gritty performance that gave New York a 2-1 lead in a best-of-seven that doesn't seem likely to end anytime soon.

"It's one game," Tortorella said in a conference call Thursday. "You take the good things out of it and try to keep momentum on your side."

It's impossible to say whether the good vibes the Rangers gained with the win will carry into Saturday, when the teams meet for Game 4 but the Capitals weren't dwelling on the loss.

"We have confidence in our team," Washington's Troy Brouwer said. "I mean, if we continue playing like we did, creating offence, blocking shots, you know, playing good, patient hockey, we'll be successful."

Capitals coach Dale Hunter played in a four-overtime game and now has stood behind the bench in a three-overtime thriller. He lost both games, but neither of them ended a series.

"Well, you go into triple overtime it's a special game," Hunter said in the wee hours Thursday. "But it's just one game and you got to bounce back."

Gaborik won it in the 115th minute. The game started at 7:40 p.m. on Wednesday and ended at 12:14 a.m. Thursday, leaving Rangers goaltender Henrik Lundqvist was too exhausted to let out a yell in celebration afterward.

"It's a feeling where, usually, I scream because I'm so excited. I was just too tired," Lundqvist said after his 45-save performance. "I kept saying 'Oh my God, it's over.' I mean, oh my God. It felt like it was never going to end." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Heat beat up on short-handed Knicks

Miami's LeBron James guards Carmelo Anthony in New York on Thursday night. JEFF ZELEVANSKY/GETTY IMAGES

LeBron James scored 32 points, including eight straight to start the fourth quarter and break open the game, and the Miami Heat took a 3-0 lead, sending the New York Knicks to an NBA post-season-record 13th straight loss, with a 87-70 win on Thursday night.

James had 17 points in the final period for the Heat, who held the short-handed Knicks to eight field goals in the second half and will go for the sweep Sunday afternoon.

Dwyane Wade added 20 points for the Heat and Mario Chalmers had 19, hitting consecutive three-pointers in the fourth quarter when the Heat finally brought some beauty to what had been an ugly game.

Carmelo Anthony scored 22 points on seven of 23 shots for the Knicks, who are playing without Amare Stoudemire, Jeremy Lin and Iman Shumpert and needed a super effort from Anthony he didn't come close to providing.

The Knicks broke the record set by Memphis from 2004-06. They haven't won a playoff game since April 29, 2001, Game 3 of a best-of-five series against Toronto.

Exhibit 52C was the semi-crushed Miller Lite beer can. Exhibit 52D was the FedEx box that once contained the beer can. Then came exhibits of gauze, tissues, syringes, cotton balls and needles, some of which were once inside the beer can, using up letters of the alphabet all the way to X.

For the first time Thursday, the jury in the Roger Clemens trial saw in person the physical evidence the government says will link the 11-time all-star to steroids, evidence Clemens' lawyer has called a "mixed-up hodgepodge of garbage."

The items were presented on Day 10 of the retrial on charges that Clemens committed perjury when he told Congress in 2008 that he had never taken steroids or human growth hormone.

Prosecutors presented the items methodically during the testimony of federal agent Jeff Novitzky, who related how he received the items from Clemens' former strength coach, Brian McNamee, on Jan. 10, 2008. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Brian McNamee, who is expected to take the stand next week as the government's key witness, has said he injected Clemens with both steroids and HGH.

Weaver's Hollywood ending in Anaheim

MLB. Local boy's California career culminates with no-hitter for Angels

Dave Weaver was in his usual seat, 20 rows behind home plate, drinking a beer and shouting instructions to his son in the quiet lulls between pitches. His wife, Gail, was alongside him, calmly enjoying a little night baseball.

It really could have been any night in three lives filled with similar evenings at ballparks all across Southern California.

Instead, Jered Weaver made an ordinary Wednesday at Angel Stadium unforgettable for the close-knit family that put him on that mound.

The Los Angeles Angels ace threw his first no-hitter in dazzling style, allowing just two base-runners while beating the Minnesota Twins 9-0 with a merciless array of pitches first taught to him by his father. After Weaver celebrated with his teammates, his parents and wife joined him on the field, gathering for a tear-soaked group hug he'll remember as vibrantly as his near-perfection.

"To have it happen at home, where I decided to stay, and have these fans cheer me on, to go out there in the ninth was pretty electric"

"It was an unbelievable experience to be able to have them come down on the field and share some tears," Weaver said. "It's special for my dad to be here. It's been a long road, and he's been here all the way."

Dave Weaver raised two major league pitchers on the other end of the Los Angeles metroplex, passing his love for baseball to Jeff and Jered through years of coaching and support.

"It's just a dream come true for him," Dave Weaver said. "He was so excited and jubilant. He's been close so many times, but to get this win at this point in their season is tremendous."

Indeed, a 7-15 start and Albert Pujols' homerless April slowed the Angels' momentum. But on the same day the Dodgers introduced their new ownership group, Weaver shoved them off Los Angeles' front pages with his no-hitter to finish up a three-game sweep of Minnesota.

"Guys were picking me up left and right," Weaver said. "We scored some runs early and took a little pressure off me. I was able to throw some strikes, and (catcher Chris) Iannetta was throwing down the right fingers. Gotta love that." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Argos make pick for the future

CFL draft. Edmonton GM uses pick acquired from Argos to get two of best in the draft

When Jim Barker convinced Eric Tillman to trade quarterback Ricky Ray to the Argos in the off-season, many thought the Edmonton GM had lost his mind.

After all, he gave up a proven No. 1 star pivot for the second pick in the CFL draft, an unproven QB in Steven Jyles and kicker Grant Shaw.

But Tillman might have pulled off the steal of the CFL draft on Thursday, grabbing a potential game changer in Wilfrid Laurier wide receiver Shamawd Chambers right from the Argos' backyard.

With their first pick (9th overall), the Argos selected six-foot-four, 291-pound Iowa State University defensive lineman Cleyon Laing, 22, ironically, from Edmonton. He has another year of NCAA eligibility so this was a pick for the Argos future.

Tillman flipped the first-round pick (2nd overall) that he got from the Argos for Ray and traded it to the BC Lions for their fourth pick, which he used to take Virginia offensive lineman Austin Pasztor before taking Chambers, considered the most explosive player in the draft, with their own sixth pick.

Without a first-round selection, Barker never had a shot at the 23-year-old player from Markham unless he pulled off a trade. He couldn't, but Tillman did and got two of the best players in the draft although both come with risks.

Pasztor has signed a free agent contract with the Minnesota Vikings, committing to the NFL team to at least the middle of the CFL season. Chambers, the fastest player at this year's evaluation camp, has a three-day tryout next week with the Philadelphia Eagles.

Laing, a Raptors and Blue Jays fan, said he was looking forward to going to their games once he joins the Argos next season after finishing his college career. Last season, he had 12 tackles in 12 games for the Cyclones.

Spiritual

IN THE LIGHT OF TRUTH
THE GRAIL MESSAGE
"...I wish to fill the gaps which have so far always remained unanswered in the souls of men as burning questions, and which never leave any serious thinker in peace, if he honestly seeks for the Truth."
ABD-RU-SHIN

The Grail Message deals clearly and objectively with important questions which move any serious seeker for the Truth:

Horoscope

Aries | March 21 - April 20. It may seem as if someone you live or work with is keeping things from you but according to the planets that isn't the case at all.

Taurus | April 21 - May 21. Put your own needs on hold and help someone with an emotional problem that they are finding difficult.

Gemini | May 22 - June 20. With Venus in your sign linked to your ruling planet Mercury, your powers of persuasion are awesome.

Cancer | June 21 - July 22. Don't let anyone tell you that you are aiming too high or expecting too much of yourself. If anything, you should be expecting a lot more.

Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22. Be who you are, not who other people say you should be. You are under no obligation to change your ways to suit family and friends.

Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22. Something you say today may not go down well with friends. That's OK because the truth needs to be told.

Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22. The approaching full moon will compel you to make changes. They may be painful but they are necessary too.

Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov. 21. The planets indicate that a time of new beginnings is here at last but to make the most of it you need to sweep away all traces of the past.

Sagittarius | Nov. 22 - Dec. 21. You need to face up to your problems. Most likely they are not real problems at all, just doubts.

Capricorn | Dec. 22 - Jan 20. You may be the most practical member of the zodiac but you have your dreams like everyone else and one dream is now within reach.

Aquarius | Jan. 21 - Feb 18. People in positions of power are watching you closely, so put on a show over the next couple of days.

Pisces | Feb. 19 - March 20. Get creative and think of ways you might be able to make your life more exciting — and more profitable too.
